| As outlined in section 2.3 of the CIB Industry Guidance to Designers, insignificant risks can usually be ignored, as can risks arising from routine construction activities, unless the design compounds or significantly alters these risks. In accordance with CDM Regulations 8.9 and 11, any significant risks relating to the design features shown on this drawing have been identified and are annotated thus:  |                                                   |     |       |       |
